How public order offences are categorised under the law

Public order offences, which vary from littering to violence, include crimes and anti-social behaviour. Anti-social behaviour is defined in law as behaviour which causes or is likely to cause harassment, alarm and distress to others.

Violent and threatening behaviour

The Public Order Act 1986 sets out the most serious disorder offences. Penalties for most of these include imprisonment and/or fines.

The Public Order Act also covers exclusion orders against trouble makers from football venues and public transport.

The Criminal Damage Act 1971 covers:

- criminal damage to property
- criminal damage with intent to endanger life

The Protection from Harassment Act 1997 protects those that have suffered harassment on at least two occasions or more.

Lesser offences

The Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 sets out ten offences, for which fines, or Penalty Notice for Disorder (PND), can be issued.

The Anti-Social Behaviour Act 2003 sets the lower age limit for PNDs at 16 years, while smaller fines can be issued in Fixed Penalty Notices (FPNs) to young people from the age of ten.

FPNs can be used for offences such as:

- littering
- graffiti
- noise nuisance

The Crime and Disorder Act 1998 sets out the conditions for ASBOs.

The Violent Crime Reduction Act 2006 sets out the conditions for drinking banning orders and alcohol exclusion zones.
